POEMS FOR WORK
We are the bees of the invisible world....
We perpetually gather the honey of the visible world in order to store it in the great golden hive of the invisible one.

READING BUDDHIST CLASSICS WITH ZHAO
AT HIS TEMPLE IN THE EARLY MORNING

I clean my teeth in water drawn from a cold well;
And while I brush my clothes, I purify my mind;
Then, slowly turning pages in the Tree-Leaf Book,
I recite, along the path to the eastern shelter.
...The world has forgotten the true fountain of this teaching
And people enslave themselves to miracles and fables.
Under the given words I want the essential meaning,
I look for the simplest way to sow and reap my nature.
Here in the quiet of the priest's temple courtyard,
Mosses add their climbing color to the thick bamboo;
And now comes the sun, out of mist and fog,
And pines that seem to be new-bathed;
And everything is gone from me, speech goes, and reading,
Leaving the single unison.

Liu Zongyuan
JIASHENG

When the Emperor sought guidance from wise men, from exiles,
He found no calmer wisdom than that of young Jia
And assigned him the foremost council-seat at midnight,
Yet asked him about gods, instead of about people.

Li Shangyin
WHILE VISITING ON THE SOUTH STREAM
THE TAOIST priest CHANG

Walking along a little path,
I find a footprint on the moss,
A white cloud low on the quiet lake,
Grasses that sweeten an idle door,
A pine grown greener with the rain,
A brook that comes from a mountain source --
And, mingling with Truth among the flowers,
I have forgotten what to say.

Liu Changing
FAREWELL TO A JAPANESE BUDDHIST priest
BOUND HOMEWARD

You were foreordained to find the source.
Now, tracing your way as in a dream
There where the sea floats up the sky,
You wane from the world in your fragile boat....
The water and the moon are as calm as your faith,
Fishes and dragons follow your chanting,
And the eye still watches beyond the horizon
The holy light of your single lantern.

Qian Qi
A CERTAIN MAN

A certain man wishes to be a prince
Of this earth; he also wants to be
A saint and master of the being-world.
Conscience cannot exist in the first:
The second cannot exist without conscience
To be disturbed but not enough to be Compelled, can neither reject the one
Nor follow the other...

Jean Toomer
IF ALL THE HURT

If all the hurt
Of all the years
Were on the scale
It would not balance
Now
this moment of Indifference

Delia Blythe
He whom I enclose with my name is weeping in this dungeon. I am ever busy building this wall all around; and as this wall goes up into the sky day by day I lose sight of my true being in its dark shadow.

I take pride in this great wall, and I plaster it with dust and sand lest a least hole should be left in this name; and for all the care I take I lose sight of my true being.

Rabindranath Tagore
Louise Welch

The keen attention of your blue eyes penetrates time,
Like the sunburst pin you wear on your royal blue shoulder.
It stabs my flesh like the beam of my own conscience
Stirring up dust in the cellars of my soul.
Even after all this time

Even
after all this time
the sun never says to the earth,
"You owe me"
Look
what happens
with a love like that-
It lights the whole world.

Hafiz
Between the conscious and the unconscious

Between the conscious and the unconscious, the mind has put up a swing:

all earth creatures, even the supernovas, sway between these two trees, and it never winds down.

Angels, animals, humans, insects by the million, also the wheeling sun and moon;

ages go by, and it goes on

Everything is swinging: heaven, earth, water, fire, and the secret one slowly growing a body.

Kabir saw that for fifteen seconds, and it made him a servant for life.

Kabir
The Atheist's Prayer

Here my petition you, God who do not exist
And into your nothingness gather these my griefs again
You who never abandoned unhappy men
Without the consolation of illusion. Do not resist

Our petition; may our longing by you be dressed
When you remove yourself furthest from my sight,
The fairy-tales to sweeten my sad night
Told by my soul, I then remember best.

How great you are my God! So great you are
That you are not, except as an idea.
How narrow the reality, though it expands so far

In order to include you. I suffer from your mere Non-existence, God, since if it were that you Were to exist, then I would really too

Miguel de Unamuno y Jugo
i thank You God for most this amazing day: for the leaping greenly spirits of trees and a blue true dream of sky; and for everything which is natural which is infinite which is yes

(i who have died am alive again today, and this s the sun's birthday; this is the birth day of life and of love and wings: and of the gay great happening illimitably earth)

how should tasting touching hearing seeing breathing any -- lifted from the no of all nothing -- human merely being doubt unimaginable You?

(now the ears of my eyes awake and now the eyes of my eyes are opened)

PRAYING

It doesn't have to be the blue iris, it could be weeds in a vacant lot, or a few small stones; just pay attention, then patch

a few words together and don't try to make them elaborate, this isn't a contest but the doorway into thanks, and a silence in which another voice may speak.

THE DIAMOND TAKES SHAPE

Some parrots
Have become so skilled with
The human voice
They could give a brilliant discourse
About freedom and God
And an unsighted man nearby might Even begin applauding with
The thought:
I just heard jewels fall from a
Great saint's mouth,
Though my Master used to say,
"The diamond takes shape slowly
With integrity's great force,
And from
The profound courage to never relinquish love."
Some parrots have become so skilled
With words,
The blind turn over their gold
And lives to caged
Feathers.

Hafiz
The Doppler Effect

WOW!
Until a second ago
I heard nothing.
Felt nothing.

And now --
Dogs are barking angrily,
Grasshoppers are happily chirping.
(How happy can a grasshopper get?)
The sound of a train whistle
A high sound and t h e n l o w
As the train approaches, then recedes.
Why?

This was clearly explained
By Herr Professor Doktor Doppler
In 1842.

These days
We apply the effect
Even to light spectra
Of galaxies and stars

But I digress.

Let us go back
To dogs and grasshoppers,
To approaching and receding trains;
Even to the sound
Of the words
"Herr professor Doktor Doppler."

Delicious.

Shimon Malin
God's Grandeur

The world is charged with the grandeur of God.
   It will flame out, like shining from shook foil;
   It gathers to a greatness, like the ooze of oil
Crushed. Why do men then now not reck his rod?
Generations have trod, have trod, have trod;
   And all is seared with trade; Bleared, smeared with toil;
   And wears man's smudge and shares man's smell: the soil
Is bare now, nor can foot feel, being shod.

And for all this, nature is never spent;
   There lives the dearest freshness deep down things;
And though the last lights off the black West went
   Oh, morning, at the brown brink eastward, springs —
Because the Holy Ghost over the bent
   World broods with warm breast and with ah! bright wings.

Gerard Manley Hopkins
Nativity

In the dark, a child might ask, What is the world? just to hear his sister promise, An unfinished wing of heaven, just to hear his brother say, A house inside a house, but most of all to hear his mother answer, One more song, then you go to sleep.

How could anyone in that bed guess the question finds its beginning in the answer long growing inside the one who asked, that restless boy, the night's darling?

Later, a man lying awake, he might ask it again, just to hear the silence charge him, This night arching over your sleepless wondering, this night, the near ground every reaching-out-to overreaches, just to remind himself out of what little earth and duration, out of what immense good-bye, each must make a safe place of his heart, before so strange and wild a guest as God approaches.

Li-Young Lee
A Story

Sad is the man who is asked for a story and can't come up with one.

His five-year-old son waits in his lap. Not the same story, Baba. A new one. The man rubs his chin, scratches his ear.

In a room full of books in a world of stories, he can recall not one, and soon, he thinks, the boy will give up on his father.

Already the man lives far ahead, he sees the day this boy will go. Don't go! Hear the alligator story! The angel story once more! You love the spider story. You laugh at the spider. Let me tell it!

But the boy is packing his shirts, he is looking for his keys. Are you a god, the man screams, that I sit mute before you? Am I a god that I should never disappoint?

But the boy is here. Please, Baba, a story? It is an emotional rather than logical equation, an earthly rather than heavenly one, which posits that a boy's supplications and a father's love add up to silence.

Li-Young Lee,
Tiger, tiger

TIGER, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?

In what distant deeps or skies
Burnt the fire of thine eyes?
On what wings dare he aspire?
What the hand dare seize the fire?

And what shoulder and what art
Could twist the sinews of thy heart?
And when thy heart began to beat,
What dread hand and what dread feet?

What the hammer? what the chain?
In what furnace was thy brain?
What the anvil? What dread grasp
Dare its deadly terrors clasp?

When the stars threw down their spears,
And water'd heaven with their tears,
Did He smile His work to see?
Did He who made the lamb make thee?

Tiger, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Dare frame thy fearful symmetry?

William Blake
THE WORLD

I SAW Eternity the other night,
Like a great ring of pure and endless light,
   All calm, as it was bright ;
And round beneath it, Time in hours, days, years
   Driv’n by the spheres
Like a vast shadow mov’d ; in which the world
   And all her train were hurl’d.
The doting lover in his quaintest strain
   Did there complain ;
Near him, his lute, his fancy, and his flights,
   Wit’s sour delights ;
With gloves, and knots, the silly snares of pleasure,
   Yet his dear treasure,
All scatter’d lay, while he his eyes did pour
   Upon a flow’r.

The darksome statesman, hung with weights and woe,
Like a thick midnight-fog, mov’d there so slow,
   He did nor stay, nor go ;
Condemning thoughts—like sad eclipses—scowl
   Upon his soul,
And clouds of crying witnesses without
   Pursued him with one shout.
Yet digg’d the mole, and lest his ways be found,
   Work’d under ground,
Where he did clutch his prey ; but one did see
   That policy :
Churches and altars fed him ; perjuries
   Were gnats and flies ;
It rain’d about him blood and tears, but he Drank them as free.

The fearful miser on a heap of rust
Sate pining all his life there, did scarce trust
   His own hands with the dust,
Yet would not place one piece above, but lives
In fear of thieves.
Thousands there were as frantic as himself,
   And hugg'd each one his pelf;
The downright epicure plac'd heav'n in sense,
   And scorn'd pretence;
While others, slipp'd into a wide excess
   Said little less;
The weaker sort slight, trivial wares enslave,
   Who think them brave;
And poor, despisèd Truth sate counting by
   Their victory.

Yet some, who all this while did weep and sing,
And sing, and weep, soar'd up into the ring;
   But most would use no wing.
O fools—said I—thus to prefer dark night
   Before true light!
To live in grots and caves, and hate the day
   Because it shows the way;
The way, which from this dead and dark abode
   Leads up to God;
A way where you might tread the sun, and be
   More bright than he!
But as I did their madness so discuss,
   One whisper'd thus,
“This ring the Bridegroom did for none provide,
   But for His bride.”

Henry Vaughan
It's Just The Same To Me

Through all my youth
I followed my lusts;
Therefrom, full of gloom
Pain and Sorrow ensued.

Pain and lust are now
Wholly kin and part of me,
Bringing joy or hurt
Both are intertwined.

Whether God through screaming hell
Or sunny heaven guides me,
Both are just the same to me
Fell I but his hand.

Hermann Hesse
Dying Stupid

My name is written in heaven and so is yours.
Heaven above is heaven below.
But what do I know?

It's possible I never lived and might die stupid, never knowing if being born is good or bad.
And is death worse or better than what?
And is each person's death the same?
How can that be if every life is different?

"All being tends toward fire," says the fire.
"All being tends toward water," says water.
"Light," says the light.
"wings," say the birds.
"Voice," says the voiceless.

And to the mysteries of appearance add Song.
And to the mysteries f disappearance add-world-creating, world-destroying Time.
But what do I mean by "world"?
Worlds? Each a world? Worlds within a world?
What do I mean when I say, "The world and I are imperfect friends?"

What do I mean when I say, "The voices of children shepherding noon signals thunder and springtime at large among the glyphs?"
Have I clung too long to notions I arrived at playing alone as a boy;
sentences my father said to copy
a hundred times each night into a notebook?
What can I say I know for sure?

Days grow old, but Day? Never.
Nights are broken by days, a thread skipping,
but Night? Never.

And in the shadow of our human dream of falling,
human voices are Creation's most recent flowers,
mere buds of fire
nodding on their stalks.

We would like to thank Mrs. Martha Heyneman for her contribution and advice.

The title of this collection comes from an adaptation by Mrs. Heyneman of Rilke’s Letters on Life, as quoted in Parabola 30:3 – Body and Soul.
"Everywhere transience is plunging into the depths of Being… It is our task to imprint this temporary, perishable earth into ourselves so deeply, so painfully and passionately, that its essence can rise again, invisible, inside us. We are the bees of the invisible. We wildly collect the honey of the invisible, to store it in the great golden hive of the invisible."

- Rainer Maria Rilke, from a letter to Halewicz, Duino Elegies, from Letters on Life.
